Asphalt provides a smooth surface for recreational uses
as there are no joints.

WALDORF COLLEGE has joined with the city and the school system to plan a multi-use recreation area east of the YMCA in Forest City, Iowa. The project is off to a good start with the recent completion of four new tennis courts.

Heartland Asphalt began the $136,000 project last fall with excavation work, installation of base rock and asphalt, and construction of a PCC sidewalk on two sides of the court area. The design, by Veenstra and Kimm Architects of Mason City, called for a 4-inch asphalt mat to be placed in two lifts over a 5-inch rock base. Heartland also installed a 2-inch PVC pipe drainage system under the rock base. A colored acrylic surface was placed this spring by Tennis Services of Iowa.

The envision for the recreation area will also include a roller blade park and an outdoor ice skating rink.
